What is Brick Club?

Brick Club is a club where young people can have fun building LEGO® models
as a team.

Brick Clubs are designed to help young people have fun together and develop skills such as team-work, problem-solving, communication and creativity. Brick Clubs are relaxed, structured and inclusive.

Brick Clubs are delivered using the Brick-by-Brick® programme methodology that has been developed by Play Included and the LEGO® Foundation, and is evidence-based.

What happens in Brick Club?

Building with LEGO®

In Brick Club, young people always build LEGO® models in a small team. There are lots of different LEGO® building activities. Normally, young people start with building LEGO® sets following instructions. They build the set with one or two other people.

Team work

If 3 people build together, each person has a different job. These can be called the Engineer, Supplier and Builder. Each person takes it in turns to do each of these jobs.

Having fun together

Young people can also build with others to create new LEGO® designs. It's important to play and have fun together!

More about Brick Club

Rules, stickers and Certificates

In Brick Club there are rules to help the group work well together. Some examples of rules are: Build together, Be kind, Have fun.

Young people have the choice to give each other stickers and to collect them on a Collector's Sheet, if they want to.

Young people can also work their way up different levels of building skill and receive certificates at each level.

What do the adults do in Brick Club

Adults must receive specialist training in the Brick-by-Brick® programme methodology to run Brick Clubs. Each Brick Club has one or two adults helping. Their job is to support the group to make decisions about what to build, who to build with and how to solve challenges. The adult helps make the group fun and playful and facilitates children to develop skills.

What ages & abilities are Brick Clubs suited to?

Brick Clubs are suitable for children and young people aged 5 to adulthood. Brick Clubs work well for those who need some support with social and emotional skills who are looking for a fun, accepting space to meet others and make friends. Activities can be adapted to different needs. Usually, Brick Clubs work best for children who can communicate using words and who enjoy building LEGO models.

What are the outcomes from Brick Club?

Research shows that children attending Brick Club for at least 3 months to a year may improve in their social skills, communication and emotional wellbeing. Children can start to make friends, play together with others and feel more confident.
